A London Club. Sheridan had a hard matter to get into

Brookes's owing to the aristocractic prejudices of old Selwyn, who black balled him at every ballot. Selwyn was not going to be elbowed by the son of an actor and the grandson of a schoolmaster, Fox, who was bent on getting his brilliant friend into the Club, discovered | purity and fineness in the market. the hidden enemy by marking the balls. Sheridan then arranged a pleasant plot. The next ballot-evening Sheridan and the Prince of Wales arrived at Brookes's arm in arm, and going into the stranger's room, sent a waiter up for Selwyn. When Selwyn came, Sheridan began a rambling political story, which lasted nearly half an hour. Presently a waiter entered entered the room on some pretext and stroked his chin as a signal that Sheridan was elected. Sheridan than got up, made some natural excuse for a few minutes' absence, and left the Prince to finish the story, "the catastrophe of which," as he told Selwyn, on leaving, "he would find very remarkable." Sheridan ran up stairs, and was received at the club-room door by Fox, who formally introduced him to the members. The Prince went on with the story for a time, then broke down, and laughing at the figure he cut asked Selwyn, as Sherry did not seem coming back, to go up stairs and let Fox finish the recital. On entering the club room Sheridan rose, thanked Selwyn for his suffrage, and offered to finish the story. "Your story! it's all a lie from begining to end!" screamed Selwyn, sitting down to whist gloomily, amid shouts of laughter.

Poor Sheridan remained many years a member, and ran up a terrible account with the house for wine and dinners. When he was turned out of office there was a talk of dismembering him, but the cruel threat was never carried into effect, and the rosy beguiler was never refused a bottle at Brookes's when he

Many good and impromptu things were said by Sheridan at Brookes's. One day at Brookes's door two royal dukes met Sheridan. The younger said, "I say, Sherry, we have just been discussing whether you are the greater fool or rogue; what is your opinion, my

Sheridan bowed, smilingly, took one by each arm, and replied, "Why, i' faith, I believe I am between both."

Unfortunately, the point of this story is to be found in an old bon mot of Duns Scotus, uttered in the French Court many centuries ago; but still it may have been furbished up by Sheridan, who was very economical with his good things.

One day at Brookes's, Sheridan, looking over a number of the Quarterly, soon after its first appearance, said: "This Mr. Gifford boasts of his power of conferring literary reputation. In the present instance he has been so generous that he has left none for himself."

The Prince of Wales was one night at Brookes's talking a great deal of nonsense about Darwin's theory that a woman's besom is thought beautiful by us because in our infancy we derive pleasure from its warmth, sustenance, and repose. .

"Therefore," said Sheridan acutely, "people who have been brought up by hand grow rapturous in after life at the very sight of a wooden spoon.

Fox and the Prince both decided that Sherry had admirably upset Darwin's fantastic theory. Another pleasant scrap of Sheridan's humor is the following: The conversation at Brooke's fell one day on Lord Henry Petty's proposed tax upon iron. Some one said the new impost seemed so unpopularit would be better to raise a tax on coals. "Hold, hold, my dear fellow," cried Sheridan, "no, no; that would be out of the frying-pan into the fire."

Sheridan was always fond of practical jokes, and he played an ingenious one on the old Duke of Devonshire one night at Brookes's. The Duke had introduced the custom of taking a broiled blade-bone of mutton for supper, followed by champagne or punch. Sheridan came in late and found the only blade-bone just ordered by the Duke. The wicked wit said nothing for some time; then sidled towards the Duke's table, and began to tell a recent adventure of his to a Mr. Hare, who sat by the Duke. Having fallen into a puddle, he said, on his way from the house, he had gone to dry his stockings in the Club kitchen. While there he had seen a hungry Irishman come in and gnaw a prime blade-bone he had found on the table. All at once a cook sprang at him, and snatching the blade-bone, threw it on the gridiron, cursing the Irishman, and telling him it was the only one in the house, and was meant for the Duke of Devonshire. "I was resolved," said Sheridan, "to tell his Grace of this in case the delicious morecume should be served up—the delicious morecume should be served up for the Duke of Devonshire. "I was resolved," said Sheridan, "to tell his Grace of this in case the delicious morceau should be served up-and by Jove!—yes by Jove! here it is!" The Duke made a face, pushed away the tray, and called for a glass of brandy. Sheridan at once followed the waiter, ordered two bottles of champagne, and secured the savory bone in an unobserved corner.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS Immediately cured and full vigor restored. This distressing affection, which renders life miserable and marriage impossible, is the penalty paid by the victims of impropriety .-Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The System becomes deranged, the Physical and Mental Functions Weakened, Loss of Procreative Power, Nervous Irritabili ty, Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Constitutional Debility, and Wasting of the Frame, Consumption, Decay and Death DR. JOHNSON, Mamber of the Royal College of Surgeons London, Graduate of one of the most eminent Colleges in the United States, and the greater whose life has been spent als of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonial: ing cures that were ever known, many troubled with ringing in the head and ears when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, bashfulness with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of mind were cured immediately. TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured hemselves by improper indulgence and solitary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business, study society or marriage. These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz. Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Paipitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Noryous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of
